

JOHN GILKEY BIO:

Artemis Technologies, Inc., founded by Mr. John Gilkey, is one of Michigan's leading website & software development companies.

Artemis started as a software and application development shop in East Lansing in 1997. John's passion for software development quickly expanded to include web design and development. He saw a need in the market for a company that could serve medium-size businesses in a variety of industries including insurance, education, and healthcare. Soon, the company encompassed over 50 employees from diverse backgrounds.

After successfully running a software development company for 20 years, John Gilkey has taken a leadership role at NuWave Technology Partners transferring his knowledge and experience to establish a DevOps offering for the company. In addition to his new role at NuWave, he leads quality initiatives and process for program development.
